For Dogs

The Indoor Pet Initiative (IPI) provides information, tools, and advice based on the soundest, most up-to-date science available for pet owners and veterinarians to create plans tailored to create and sustain a thriving relationship with their pets. Our goal is to help you and your dogs have the best life together you possibly can. The indoor Dog site has information in the following sections:

Puppy Prep School has guidance for basic manners, crate training, house training, socialization, puppy classes, and getting to know your veterinarian, as well as tips on managing mouthy behaviors and warning signs that your puppy may have a behavior problem.

Environmental enrichment will show you how food, novel objects (to smell, see, touch hear and taste), socialization, and Positive Training contribute to your dog's well-being.

New additions provides basic information on making new human and pet additions go as smoothly and safely as possible.

Changes in aging pets describes behavioral signs associated with sensory and cognitive decline in dogs and cats, along with providing current information on treatment options.
